

Cities without citizens: reconfiguring law and local power in urban Angola

Sylvia Croese

*UC Irvine
Assistant Professor*

Bio: Sylvia Croese is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Global and International Studies at the University of California, Irvine. Trained as an urban political sociologist, her work examines the intersection of urban politics, planning and governance in African cities. She is the author of Gradualist lawfare: the politics of law and local power in urban Angola (forthcoming with Oxford University Press), which situates the persistent deferral of local democracy in Angola within wider debates around the contested nature of local government in Africa and the global rise of authoritarian lawmaking in cities. She is also a co-editor of Localizing the Sustainable Development Goals in African cities (Springer, 2022); Reframing the urban challenge in Africa: knowledge co-production from the South (Routledge, 2021); Refractions of the national, the popular and the global in African cities (African Minds, 2021). Previously based in South Africa, she remains a Visiting Senior Lecturer at the School of Architecture and Planning at the University of the Witwatersrand and a Research Associate with the African Centre for Cities, University of Cape Town.
